I had no realistic prospects for finding work in my field. My savings were gone, and I felt trapped. I couldn't even tell my relatives that I'd been fired, because I'd have to explain why I was living off my credit card. I told myself it was for a temporary fix, and that a job would come along soon. But the next time I called, it was someone else on the line. I finally understood how out of touch my father was when he told me, "Money doesn't grow on trees," nearly 30 years ago. "It just gets there slowly." So the only answer was to save money. But as I began to watch my small budget, I saw that I had a few essentials in my life. I was too hungry to cook dinner, so I started making myself sandwiches, and I'd eat three for lunch. And I wasn't saving money on cleaning and laundry. I finally discovered that I had it in my power to save money and to make the necessary sacrifices in my life. Can you do the same thing? David E.
