That's the highest deficit in our nation's history, and it's $60 billion more than it ran in 2009. The budget deficit, just as it has the past few years, dwarfed the deficit from the economic crisis. The Congressional Budget Office (CBO) projects the federal budget deficit will balloon to $1.44 trillion this year. The budget deficit is growing because the economy is stronger than expected. The White House says the economy grew by 3.5% last year, and CBO expects 3.4% growth in 2014. The budget deficit is growing because tax revenues are far higher than expected. The Congressional Budget Office projects that tax revenues will rise by $345 billion this year, the largest increase in a decade. The budget deficit is growing because spending cuts were not deep enough. Even though the budget deficit is expected to jump from $1.15 trillion this year to $1.44 trillion in 2014, it would have been higher without last year's $1.2 trillion increase in defense spending. And don't forget, the budget deficit includes Social Security and Medicare, which the federal government pays for but doesn't spend. CBO estimates the Social Security trust fund will exhaust its reserves in 2015, and that Medicare will begin paying out more than it takes in starting in 2016. In December, the nation added 136,000 jobs and the unemployment rate dropped from 8.3% to 7.6%. But the budget deficit has been increasing all year. And it's expected to get worse. The deficit has increased every year since George W. Bush took office, and it's the highest in 10 years. And it's on track to get worse in the current fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30. The current annual deficit will be $0.58 trillion, an increase of 30% from last year. The Congressional Budget Office is projecting the deficit will increase to $1.44 trillion in 2014. That's the highest the deficit has been since it hit $1.37 trillion in 2009 82157476af
